

Every four years, since 1950, a week-long music festival is organized to celebrate Moravian music, explore the history of Moravian music, to teach and share, and to seek new avenues and directions in music. This year, July 23 – 29, 2017, the 25th Moravian Music Festival will attract hundreds of musicians to Winston-Salem, NC, and be centered among Home Moravian Church, Salem College, and Old Salem.

Hundreds more will attend and enjoy the many free performances of both new and historic Moravian music in concert venues at Home, Trinity, and Calvary Moravian churches, as well as Winston-Salem State University's Williams Auditorium. We hope you will join us.

Replete with workshops and lectures, the Moravian Music Festival is a learning opportunity for singers, instrumentalists, and directors (Moravian and non-Moravian). It is full of practical ideas, skills, and techniques for the musician, the musical group, and the congregation.

Concurrently, there will be a children's summer music program, a youth program, special young adult events, and an organ crawl! Participants will choose tracks for Chorus or Concert Band, along with smaller ensembles of handbells, trombones, chamber music. Each day will be comprised of workshops and rehearsals for ensembles, with special moments for worship, fellowship, and reflection. Each evening will begin with a band prelude, and culminate with featured concerts by the Chorus and Orchestra, Concert Band, and Chamber music ensembles. The Festival will also have an Anthem Sing, a Singstunde, a Lovefeast (of course), and a partnership concert with the Salem Band.

The Festival is for everyone, serving musicians of all ages and all levels, from beginner to director, Moravian and non-Moravian. Advance registration is required; forms are posted on the website, and online registrations is available there.

The Moravian Music Festival is a unique opportunity to celebrate the Moravian musical heritage.
